How are customers protected?

Protections and support

Understand the protections you have when dealing with this firm, and how to make a complaint.

Customer protections and the Register

The Register tells you the activities the FCA has given this firm permission to carry out. The Register can only give you general information about the help from other organisations if something goes wrong

The Financial Ombudsman Service and the Financial Services Compensation Scheme (FSCS) are the main organisations who may be able to help if something goes wrong when dealing with this firm. The Financial Ombudsman Service may be able to resolve your complaint against this firm if the firm fails to deal with it properly. The FSCS may be able to provide compensation if this firm goes out of business owing you money.

The protection provided by the Financial Ombudsman Service and FSCS depends on the activity a firm is carrying out. There are also other conditions, such as needing to bring a complaint or claim within a set time period, that affect any protection you may have. The final decision to consider any specific complaint or claim is determined by the Financial Ombudsman Service or the FSCS. You should always check which activities are covered by these organisations before doing business with this firm.
